ver, George B. Duffy byie May Walton, the of Mr. and Mrs. E. 17-year-old dat Walton, of 3118 Oak street, brought her unhappy young life to an end Saturday night with a dose of laudanum. She died, heartbroken and alone, in the rear of a neighbor's house, the rash act not being committed until the failure of Miss Wal-to leave a ballroom, where he was enjoying the company of her rival.

All night long her lifeless form lay on the cold earth, and was not discovered until yesterday morning, by Mrs. McCoy, a neighbor. Duffy was subsequently taken to Central police station and closely questioned, but was not held.

Miss Walton had lived in Kansas City with her parents and brothers and sisters for several years. She was a young woman of many excellent traits of character. Her father has a barber shop at 1508 Grand evenue, and about a year ago moved with his family to 3118 Oak street. The Waltons had lived in that vicinity for a greater ength of time, and those who knew the bright-faced Vivie loved her for her quiet ways. In the rear apartments of the next house north, 3116 Oak street, lives the family of Edward Duffy, a laborer.

Four years ago Mr. Duffy's son, George B., now a young man of 22 years of age, made the acquaintance of Miss Walton, then living near him, and soon won her af-happiness of the young woman in the perfrom Denver to visit her mother, Mrs. Frances Green, who lives at 3110 street. Mrs. Barker has a husband, a conher much attention, which she did not re-fuse. Seeing this, Miss Walton became despondent, and it is said sought out Duffy on several occasions and besought him not said, she said to him that she would kill

"I have threatened before to kill myself for you, George," she said, "and I will do it this time."

Duffy seems to have paid no attention to

Saturday night he and Mrs. Barker were Saturday night he and Mrs. Barker were members of a party that went to a dance at 12M Walnut street. Miss Walton did not accompany them, because she did not care to go. She asked Duffy not to go, but if he did, not to pay too much attention to Mrs. Barker. About 9 o'clock Miss Walton left her home, telling her mother she would run out to a neighbor's for a few moments. Half an hour later she appeared at Doerschuk's drug store. Twelfth street and Grand avenue, and purchased a small bottle of laudanum. The clerk who sold it says she appeared perfectly rational, saying she wanted the drug for a medical purpose. He noticed nothing unusual in her manner or appearance.

Where she went from the drug store is not known, but shortly before 10 o'clock she walked quietly into the dance hall, took her lover by the hand and with tears in her blue eyes almost dragged him from deserted hallway.

Duffy was entertaining several cousins from another state and the dance was arranged in their honor. He had been drinking, but seeking to know by the look in Miss Walton's eyes that she meant trouble, permitted himself to be led quietly away. His story of what occurred is as follows:

"When we got in the hall Miss Walton handed me a small bottle, saying it had contained laudanum and that she had swallowed it. She was crying and I tried to comfort her. After talking with her a few moments, she handed me a note which I stuck in my pocket. We went to the bottem of the stairs and I tried to make her outle crying but she wouldn't We her quit crying, but she wouldn't. We walked to the corner of Thirteenth street and Grand avenue, where she finally quit crying and I placed her on a Westport cable car. It was then about 10:30 o'clock."

crying and I placed her on a Westport cable car. It was then about 10:20 clock."

After leaving the girl, Duffy returned to the dance. Asked by a Journal reporter why he did not take some action when he learned the young woman had taken poison, he said he thought she was only fooing and had said what she did merely to frighten him. He did not read the note at the time, but danced until midnight with it and the empty bottle in his coat pocket. He did not investigate the girl's claim that she had taken poison.

When Miss Walton parted from Duffy, she again wept bitterly. Several persons on the car noticed her strange actions and remarked to the conductor that something must be wrong with her. J. Levy, a butcher, in stall 23 at the city market, and his sons were on the car and spoke to the conductor about the young woman's queer actions. A colored man endeavored to talk to her, but she would not answer him. When the conductor made a second trip through the car she attempted to pay him a second time for her fare, but when he refused it and wanted to talk with her she hid her face in the light cape she was wearing.

She left the car at Thirty-second and Thirty-second street does not run east beyond Main street. Her mind must have been tolerably clear at this time, for her own home is on a direct line east from the terminus of Thirty-second street and a distance of only three blocks from Main street. Evidently she wanted to reach home before she died.

After she crossed through several yards she entered the back yard of Mrs. J. W. McCoy, 3124 McGee street, where she evidently fell exhausted. She was then within one block of her home, which she was destined never to see again. It must have been nearly 11 o'clock when she fell in Mrs. McCoy's yard and expired. Her dead body was found by Mrs. CcCoy at 7:15 yesterday morning when she went into the back yard. Miss Walton's hat was beside her head and as there was no sign of a struggle death must have ensued easily and quickly.

Word of the finding of the dead body of Miss Walton was conveyed to Officer Bell. of Westport, who notified Coroner Bedford. While the coroner was preparing to have it removed to Stewart's morgue many hundred people visited the McCoy yard and viewed the body, trampling the grass and breaking down the shrubbery. Persons found Miss Walton's cape near where she left the cable car and between that point and the place where her body was found were also found hat pins and side combs. A tintype picture of Duffy lay near her body.

Duffy remained down town after the dance until about 6 o'clock yesterday morning, when he started home on foot with one of his visiting cousins, Roy Crawford, and Guy Hitchcock. They did not go to Duffy's home, but crawled into the hayloft of the barn of Mrs. Bertha Wocds, who is his aunit, and lives directly across the street from him. There he slept off a drunken stupor within a block of where lay the dead body of the girl who had died for love of him.

About 9 o'clock Marshall Tom Morrison, of Westport, found Duffy and brought him to this city. He was closely questioned at Central police, and Mr. Morrison the could only tell the story of the night before and denied emph Anadarko, O. T., Sept. 20 .- (Special.) One of the most remarkable celebrations ever seen in this country took place at here in the Kiowa and Comanche reservation, on Friday. The occasion was th celebration of the eighty-sixth anniversary celebration of the eighty-sixth anniversary of the independence of the Mexican republic, the entertainment being gotten up by the many Mexicans who live in the reservation. About 200 Mexicans were present, all dressed in the most gorgeous fashion, and participating in the exercises with as nuch gusto and patricitism as the most loyal American small boy could exhibit on the glorious Fourth.

During the morning there were nine bull fights, the gladiators being all mounted on horseback and fighting to the finish—of the bull—every time. At noon came a grand free barbecue, and after dinner the speeches. The orators were Mexican, American and Indian, each talking in a different language not understood by those of the other nationalities, but everybody applauded and cheered all the speeches. Several Indian chiefs spoke in their native language and one essayed to talk in Erglish. He managed to get off part of a free silver speech he had heard while in town recently and was loudly cheered by recently and was loudly cheered by at Leavenworth, where she lives. Mrs. Thomas has had rather a checkered office in the investigation of the case. She was reared in Chillicothe, Mo. Her mother's name is Sarah Murray. She is living and is over 80 years of age. Nellie's name was Ellen when she lived at home. She had six children before her marriage, on May 13, 1876, to one Milton Thomas Green, The father of these children was said to have been a man named McGuire, then a butcher in Chillicothe, now dead. She lived only a short time with Green, when they separated, she going to Iowa, and he to St. Joseph, Mo.

She was married by Judge Hawn, of Leavenworth, Kas., in June, 1884, to the now deceased soldier, George Thomas, alias George Jewett, Neither she nor Green ever obtained a divorce. The prisoner's son, one of the McGuire boys, and her hus band, Thomas, five years ago induced an old soldier, an inmate of the National Military home at Leavenworth, to enter Nellie's home, either for the purpose of robpery, or to invest in her virtue, and there killed him. The husband, Thomas, and the son were arrested and lodged in Leavencide, and the latter is serving a term in the Kansas penitentiary for the murder of the old soldier.

Nellie then devoted her energies to securing a pension from the government, alleging that she had never married prior to her marriage to Thomas, alias Jewett.

In the investigation of the claim, the marriage of the prisoner to Green was brought to light. Green himself was found, the is now living at St. Joseph, Mo., and is in the employ of the Burlington Railroad Company. He is married, also, and has a large family.

A small bit of interesting history is also attributed to this man Milton Green, and is as follows: Years ago, when the enterprising P. T. Barnum sprung upon the guillible people his wild and savage "Zuluman," as is well known, it was necessary to keep the "Yulu" abstacked.

guilible people his wild and savage "Zulu man," as is well known, it was necessary to keep the "Zulu" chained, and he was led in the procession by five stalwart men, by chains attached to him. No one suspected the identity of the "Zulu man" until he was discovered by an old colored woman, at the St. Louis exhibition of the show. Poking her umbrella through the cage, she remarked: "Dat's no Zulu man; dat's ole Milt Green, of Chillicothe." Milt was then compelled to give up the job.

OHIO WHITE CAPPERS. Whip a Well-to-Do Farmer and Bury Him Alive-His Children

Also Whipped. Toledo, O., Sept. 20,-The Whitecaps have reated another sensation in this county by whipping a man named Huntsman, who ives at Holland station, ten miles from here, and burying him alive. The story only leaked out, although the outrage was committed on September 9. The Hunts mans, under threats, were atraid to communicate to the authorities the story, but neighbors learned of the facts and informed the police to-day. The facts, as reported to the police, are that two of the Huntsman children, coming from the postoffice, were picked up on the road by two men in a buggy and accused of stealing a pocket-book containing $90. The next night a party of men came to the Huntsman house and, after calling Huntsman out of bed, seized and dragged him outside and peat and abused him in a frightful manner. They then carried him to a grave, and, putting him in it, covered him with earth. After a while they dug him up. Then they beat and abused him a second time, and finally buried him again. Then they dug him up for the second time and again lashed him and then drove away. The two children were also lashed. The affair occurred about midnight. The discovery was made by accident. Bestman was not found, but the police received information in the afternoon that he is living in Dallas, Tex., and wired the chief of police there to arrest him at once.

The discovery of this enormous quantity of explosive matter and the story of Bestman himself, so far as now known to the police, brings to light a tale of anarchistic plotting such as Chicago has not had revealed since the dark days of 1885, when the existence of the city was threatened, and Spies and his comrades sung on the gallows for the bomb thrown at the Haymarket massacre. Much correspondence with the condemned anarchists was also found.

There was no sign of life in the Dervish works, but soon a commo tion was perceived among the boats along the bank, and a native in one of them was discerned in the act of waving something, as though for a signal to this side of the iver. The steamer Dal, of the expeditionary force, thereupon proceeded to the west El Hatir had been evacuated by the enemy Dervish fighting man was left in sight. The detachment on the Dal sent back to the camp on this side of the river twentyseven boats, which had been manned by the native residents of El Hafir and loaded the native residents of El Haft and loaded with a great quantity of grain. The natives announced that the enemy had departed, and that Wad Bishara, the young emir of Dongola, who commanded the Dervishes, was wounded in yesterday's fight. A shell from an Egyptian battery burst in his tent, inflicting wounds in his breast and head, the former being a severe hurt.

After the gunboats of the expedition had After the gunboats of the expedition had forced their way through past the forts at El Hafir yesterday, and had proceeded southward toward Dongola, the Dervishes apparently perceived that El Hafir was no longer the place for them, and prepared to depart. They buried as many of their dead as they had time for. The rest were MCEBARED with a stone around the neck evidence.

brown into the Nile.

Dongola Occupied.

This afternoon the news arrived here that the steamers and gunboats of the expedition had reached Dongola and had landed a force which immediately occupied the treasury and the Granstore, the principal stronghold of the town. This news was received here with delight, as it is supposed that the enemy is now marching between here and Dongola in a much hampered condition, by the reason of the number of their wounded and their retreat along, he river bank threatened by the steamers, which can destroy at any moment the food supplies stored at Dongola if they cannot hold that place against the retreating forces of Dervishes until land forces of the expedition have advanced to co-operate with them.

Yesterday's engagement at El Hafir seems to have altogether dismayed the Dervishes, who placed great reliance upon the fort at that place. They believed that that fort would be able to prevent the passage of any of the steamers of the expedition up the Nile. The artillery fire from this side of the river seems to have entirely disconcerted them, their batteries being destroyed as soon as the smoke from them indicated a target for the British and Egyptian gunners.

A Visit to El Hafir. Dongola Occupied.

A Visit to El Hafir.

As soon as the news of the evacuation of El Hafir was received, the correspondent of the Associated Press crossed the river and made a survey of the enemy's late position. It was found that their mud defenses had been built with great care, but the rifle trenches only permitted the men a very short and straight front for protection. Hats were still strewn along and within the trenches, and in the straw men a very short and straight front for protection. Hats were still strewn along and within the trenches, and in the straw shelters were the remains of carcasses of sheep, which had been killed to supply food to the defenders. The dead had been burled or thrown into the river.

Further north on the river bank whs found their biggest battery. This work contained five embrasures for guns, three in front and two at the side. This battery had been terribly knocked about by the artillery fire from the east bank and from the steamer.

welcomed the appearance of the British and Egyptian expedition, and seem to re-gard their advance as assurance of a deliv-erance from the rule of the khalifa and the Baggaras, the khalifa's native tribe, who have exercised a cruel domination over the Nile tribes.

The Fight on Saturday.

From the description of yesterday's fight furnished by the natives, it appears that the dervish cavalry kept out in the desert watching the fight and waiting for a landing of opposing forces to take part. Wad Bishara, the dervish commander, was wounded at about noon and was immediately carried out of range of the fire, repeatedly exclaiming to those surrounding him: "Allah is against me!"

Wad Bishara decided to evacuate his position during the night. He was able to remove his guns, but he was forced to leave behind a great quantity of ammunition for both the artillery and the rifles. The dervish steamer which was sunk by the expedition's horse battery was said to have also been loaded with ammunition and guns.

This morning at 5.30 clock the troops of have also been loaded with ammunition and guns.

This morning at 5:30 o'clock the troops of the expedition began crossing the river. McDonald's brigade was the first over and the soldiers were met with the wildest and maddest signs of delight by the natives. They shouted in a frenzied manner and danced about the troops, singing and shouting like lunatics.

The first use made of the captured dervish boats was to transport the Second brigade to El Hafir, which is a very fertile spot, offering plenty of green herbage for the animals—a pleasing contrast to the rough rocks and desert sands of much of the march.

rough rocks and desert sands of much of the march.

It is hoped that to-day the whole of the expeditionary force will effect a crossing of the Nile so as to camp at El Hafir to-night and continue the march to Dongola to-morrow.

Owing to the lack of a supply of telegraph cable to lay in the Nile, the terminus of the field telegraph still remains at Kerma, on the east bank of the Nile.

British Losses Light. The losses of the expedition up to last

The losses of the expedition up to last evening were only five wounded, despite the enemy's hot fire. The field horse battery and the men who handled the Maxim guns had an especially warm corner. During the engagement the men lunched behind any hasty shelter that could be devised. The Maxim guns were manned by the Connaught Rangers, and the Tenth battalion was ranged along the bank of the river facing the dervish position. They fired three rounds at the enemy.

One of the most striking things noted during the fight was the long range of the enemy's Remington rifles. At a distance of 1,200 yards, they were able to do a deal of damage and some of their bullets struck at least 2,000 yards from the point of firing.

The weather for the last few days has been rather hot. The wind from the north has brought nearly all the boats up the river bearing sufficient supplies for the wants of the expedition. It is the general impression here that the dervishes will not make any further stand. It is evident that Wad Bishara had brought up all his effective forces from Dongola intending to make a stand at El Hafir. Even if he is able to recover Dongola from the river force of the expedition, which has occupied it, it is not considered possible that he should make a stand against the advance of the combined land and river forces.

Funds for Armenians.

Funds for Armeniams.

London, Sept. 21.—Lady Henry Somerset writes from Marsellles an appeal to the Daily News to collect funds to send the refugee Armenians to America. The Daily News this morning also prints an appeal from Miss Frances Willard to her sisters in America on the same subject, and in an editorial the same journal rejoices to be able to assist in such a project.

Sultan Replies to the Powers.

Constantinople, Sept. 20.—The sultan has issued a long reply to the collective note of the powers. He declares that the massacres were provoked by Armenian revolutionists. He denies flatly that the rioters were known to and directed by the government agents, and asserts that the Armenians assumed Mussulman costumes in order to perpetrate their crimes.
